ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of coding information for transmission over a communication channel involves differentially coding selected bits of an input sequence with respect to bits of a previous input symbol to generate a transmit sequence comprising a plurality of transmit symbols. The 5   differential coding method can be used in combination with unequal error protection and interleaving to protect bits during transmission.